

Every Person Matters

SUZANNE'S STORY

Suzanne recalls the moment she realized her baby was dying. She grabbed the staff at the clinic, yelling “Doctor! Doctor!” She wanted to fight—desperate for anything that could save his life. But there was nothing she or the doctors could do. Her son’s tiny body couldn’t fight off malaria. It had reached his brain, causing him to convulse.

Distraught, Suzanne returned home with empty arms. In her grief, she burned all her son’s clothes. It was too painful to see them and remember the boy she’d lost.

A year and a half later, Suzanne gave birth to another son, Rwamba. Around the same time, a big change took place in the refugee camp where she lives. Medical Teams arrived to oversee programs dedicated to caring for children with malaria.

Now, thanks to you, sick children are being treated quickly. This year, you helped stock clinics with medicine so young patients have the best chance at survival. You helped distribute mosquito nets to prevent malaria. You helped train refugee volunteers to go home to home, checking on families so no sick child falls through the cracks.

You gave mothers like Suzanne a priceless gift—access to life-saving medical care. Because you cared, children like Rwamba are alive and healthy, and mothers like Suzanne have newfound hope.

Letter From the President & CEO

YOU ACTED. YOU HEALED. YOU LOVED.

It’s undeniable—the world we live in is broken. Conflicts rage and disasters wreak havoc. Families are forced from their homes. People die from causes that could have been prevented. They suffer from diseases that could have been treated.

The need in our world can feel overwhelming. You ask, “What difference can I really make?” You recognize that crises impact individuals. People just like you and me. People with the same emotions, desires, heartbreaks and hopes.

This year, in the face of immense need, you chose action. You chose love. And because of that, you healed countless individuals. You reminded those who felt forgotten that they were not alone.

Inside this annual report, I invite you to take a moment to meet some of the people whose lives you touched. Mothers like Suzanne, whose story you can read on the left side of this letter.

Your generosity helped reach 4.2 million people with loving and life-saving care. You restored health to toddlers like Godgift, a little boy whose loose skin hung from his frail body until he was able to get nutrient-rich food. You ensured clinics had supplies like IV fluids and antibiotics so vulnerable children like Methothe could recover from malaria and pneumonia. You helped refugees like Shaza find hope and purpose by empowering them to care for the health of their neighbors.

Thank you for believing that every life is precious. Thank you for saving the lives of people in crisis. You showed that every person matters. To God and to us.

Faithfully yours,

Martha Holley Newsome
President and CEO

Our Calling

Daring to love like Jesus, we boldly break barriers to health and restore wholeness in a hurting world.

Thank You

Your compassionate support provided health care for 4.2 million people in crisis in 17 countries. You've brought hope and healing to people around the world.

EVERY PERSON MATTERS. TO GOD AND TO US.

In our broken world, so many people are suffering. They are pushed to the margins and forgotten. Men, women and children. Those who are persecuted and without homes. Hurting. Sick. In crisis.

God calls us to love the vulnerable, to dare to love like Jesus. He works through us to provide them with protection and care. We work to restore health as the first step to restoring hope. Because every person deserves the chance for a better life. Because every person—no matter where they are or how desperate their situation—matters.

GOING WHERE WE'RE NEEDED MOST

We mobilize staff and volunteers quickly—entering places of turmoil, disease and natural disaster—to save lives and leave communities healthier.

We care for the hurting in front-line clinics, refugee camps and remote villages. In places where mothers and babies are dying. Where outbreaks threaten to overtake entire communities. Where local health systems are overwhelmed or non-existent.

SAVING LIVES

People in crisis are dying from preventable causes. Our staff and volunteers are working to change that by bringing basic but life-saving medical care.

Our goal is to save lives. But the people we serve are more than patients, they're our brothers and sisters. They have names, stories and value. We are called to provide loving care. That means sitting with refugees, mothers and children in their emotional pain as we treat their physical pain. Offering comfort and compassion amid grief and loss.

EMPOWERING COMMUNITIES

The people we serve are creative, committed and resilient. We build on their strengths.

We teach people how to seek out their sick neighbors. Organize community birth attendants and connect them to clinics. Train local medical staff. Teach families about handwashing and good nutrition. Encourage mothers to get prenatal care and give birth in a clinic.

Poised to Meet Global Challenges

For forty years, you have made a difference for millions of people through your support of Medical Teams International. Because you felt called to put God's love into action, lives have been saved, wounds have been healed and hope has been restored for people in crisis.

As we embark on our 40th year, we are called to serve more people in more places with even better care. The needs in our world are great. We are facing the worst refugee crises the world has ever known. Natural disasters create immense suffering. Here at home, cost and access prevent many people from getting critical dental and medical care.

Medical Teams is poised to meet these growing crises. With your help, we can enter areas of greater risk and greater need. Together, we can act as Christ's healing hands to save and transform lives.

40 YEARS OF LOVE IN ACTION

Our story began in November 1979 when our founder, Ron Post, was sitting in his easy chair watching the nightly news. Scenes of suffering flashed across the screen. Thousands of Cambodians were trying to escape mass killings at the hands of the Khmer Rouge.

Ron watched as aid workers picked up a young girl's body from a rice field. Looking across the room at his teenage daughter, Ron thought "What if we lived in Cambodia? Would anyone care about us?" He immediately decided to recruit a medical team to help refugees.

Ron, a businessman without any medical experience, didn't know how he was going to make it happen. He prayed for answers and boldly took steps to put a team together. In two weeks' time, a group of 27 volunteers were on their way to a refugee camp in Thailand.

Ron's decision to get up off the couch and turn love into action was the beginning of four decades of providing life-saving medical care for people in crisis. Medical Teams' staff and volunteers responded to famines, earthquakes, hurricanes and refugee crises, becoming internationally recognized as a humanitarian health leader.

Now, as we commemorate our 40th year, we continue to put love into action every day—just like Ron did so many years ago. Together with supporters like you, we're caring for the people in our world who are hurting, sick and afraid.

Refugee Crises

Imagine the chaos of frantically gathering your family and running. Hoping you're not caught before you reach safety. People forced from home have survived so much. It is unacceptable that they should get to safety only to die from a treatable illness.

You help welcome the sick, the injured and the afraid. You provide loving care to prevent and treat deadly illnesses. Because of you, families are spared more suffering and loss. You also empower refugees with health knowledge that they can share with their neighbors. Because every person—every mother, father, son and daughter—matters.

KHUSIDA

Khusida writhed in pain as each contraction overtook her body. Hour after hour she labored but the baby wasn't coming. Khusida was trying to give birth at home—a common practice in her community of Rohingya refugees. Despite her fear of delivering in a clinic, the pain was so intense that Khusida finally decided to go to a nearby Medical Teams facility.

“When I first arrived at the clinic I was scared. I never wanted to deliver in an unfamiliar environment. I was missing my home. The room looked dark and with all of the scary medical equipment. But as soon as the doctor started speaking to me, I started to relax.”

Your support allowed Khusida to receive loving care from expert doctors and safely deliver her baby without complications. If Khusida had tried to deliver at home, it could have cost her life and the life of her baby girl. Gratefully, Khusida explained, “I am very happy that my first baby was born under the supervision of a doctor. I'm also happy that me and my baby are both safe.”

Khusida is on a mission now to encourage other women in her community to deliver at a Medical Teams clinic—a place where she felt loved, safe and cared for.

Disaster Response

The worst disasters in the world today are caused by conflict. Countries welcoming refugees are often overwhelmed trying to meet the immense need for medical care. That's why we work in places like Lebanon and Uganda—countries with large refugee populations. Your support provides life-saving care and relieves pressure on local health systems.

Natural disasters also unleash chaos. Your generosity brings healing amid devastation. Last year, you helped send aid to survivors of Cyclone Idai and Hurricane Dorian through partners on the ground. You helped reduce the spread of disease and restore dignity for survivors by sending basic hygiene items like antiseptic wipes, soap, toothbrushes and toothpaste.

HANAA

Hanaa is a Syrian refugee living in Lebanon. She was nine months pregnant when a devastating winter storm hit her community. She and her five children tried to stay warm by huddling under a blanket in their makeshift tent. A freezing wind and driving rain whipped at the tarp walls.

It was in the middle of this storm that Hanaa began to feel labor pains. She and her husband were able to make it to a hospital where she gave birth to a healthy girl.

Despite a safe birth, Hanaa still had a lot to worry about. She wondered what would happen to her newborn baby when they returned to their cold, damp tent. Could her fragile baby survive? Where would she find more of the baby supplies that had been destroyed by the storm? That's where you stepped in.

Your generosity made sure Hanaa had the support system she needed. You helped train refugee volunteers who care for the health of their neighbors. Some of these volunteers had worked with Hanaa throughout her pregnancy. They helped her find a warm shelter for her and her newborn baby to stay.

Your support also gave her supplies like diapers, wipes and a thermometer to help her get through the first few weeks.

Because of you, Hanaa and her baby were cared for during some of the most vulnerable hours of their lives.

Your generosity made sure Hanaa had the support system she needed.

Mothers & Children

It's often said that mothers have the hardest job in the world—creating and nurturing new life. In the places where we work, their job is even harder. Birth is often a matter of life and death. Illnesses like malaria run rampant. Babies struggle to gain weight without the right nutrition.

Your support relieves the suffering of mothers and children. Imagine the joy a woman feels when she delivers a healthy baby. Or the relief you give a parent when their sick child recovers their health. Picture the peace a mother feels when she is equipped with information to keep her family healthy.

That is the impact you have.

GODGIFT

Mami pats her grandson, Godgift, playfully on his stomach before lifting him up, feeling his newfound weight in her arms. Over the past five months, Godgift's body has transformed. Before your support changed his life, he was severely malnourished.

Godgift rarely ate, and when he did, it didn't stay down for long. With little stick arms covered by loose flaps of wrinkled skin, he was immobile.

Mami remembers how afraid she felt as she held Godgift in her arms. "I was feeling so bad," she says. "He was only getting skinnier."

Mami's home is a small mud hut only a couple of miles from the Medical Teams-supported clinic. Mami took her grandson to be examined by doctors at the clinic.

Doctors immediately gave Godgift emergency food and explained to Mami the steps for recovery. She would need to feed him porridge mixed with micronutrient powder several times a day. She would also have to return to the clinic regularly so doctors could monitor his progress.

As Mami cooks the porridge outside, Godgift's eyes light up. Godgift loves to eat now, Mami says.

He hasn't been sick once since being on the feeding program, Mami says, and has continued to gain weight. Mami says she feels blessed by Godgift's recovery and the support, advice and treatment he received—treatment available because of you.

Over the past five months, Godgift's body has been transformed.

U.S. Programs

MOBILE DENTAL

For people across the Pacific Northwest, tooth pain is debilitating. Cost and access prevent many from getting to a dentist. They must put off urgent dental treatment. Untreated, oral disease can lead to other health problems that affect a person's quality of life.

Your support helps Medical Teams' Mobile Dental vans go to places where people need urgent help. Volunteer dentists, hygienists and assistants treat each patient with exceptional care. Patients leave the vans relieved of pain and comforted.

DIANA

Over the years, Diana has held many jobs—office manager, store manager and working in a group home. Despite years of hard work, Diana is now without a job or insurance because of several knee surgeries and a degenerative disease which causes her great pain.

Her husband is retired, leaving them on a very limited income. Medicare helps with their medical bills, but oral health is not covered by the program. What's more, in Seaside, Oregon where Diana lives, no dentists accept Medicaid, making it even more difficult for low-income residents to get basic dental care.

Recently, Diana chipped a tooth, and she's afraid of losing it. She tries to make a little money by crafting and selling goods at the local farmer's market, but it's not enough to cover the cost of the oral health care she so desperately needs.

When she visited the Mobile Dental clinic sponsored by Providence Health & Services, Diana was so thankful for the compassionate care she received from the volunteer dental staff.

Smiling, she said, "I'm just so grateful the Mobile Dental clinic is here today, and I can get help. Thank you."

Diana was so thankful for the compassionate care she received.

Your Gifts Are at Work Around the World

This year, refugee families torn apart by conflict, mothers and children sickened by preventable diseases, survivors of deadly hurricanes—people who had lost everything—were given the critical medical care they so desperately needed. With your gifts, Medical Teams International was able to care for the hurting and demonstrate that no matter how desperate their situation, every person matters.

Medical Supplies

Sometimes just being able to get to a clinic or hospital isn't enough. In many places, doctors, nurses and midwives lack basic medical supplies to care for their patients. If a hospital doesn't have IV supplies or a surgeon doesn't have sterile equipment, lives are put at risk.

Your support helps fill this gap by shipping medical supplies that prevent infection and keep people healthy. With the help of an enormous team of volunteers, donated medical supplies are sorted, packed and shipped. Because of you, health facilities here and around the world are equipped to provide life-saving care.

METHOTHE

At a clinic in the Mtendeli refugee camp, Donatha sits in silence as she cradles 3-year-old Methothe. As she feels his forehead for fever, the lethargic boy doesn't even stir. It's not the first time they've visited the clinic—Methothe is frequently sick with malaria.

Before long, the doctor calls them inside. After listening to his chest through a stethoscope and ordering a full blood panel, it's confirmed—in addition to malaria, the child has pneumonia.

In a nearby ward, young children like Methothe receive round-the-clock care. Because of your support, the clinic is stocked with IV supplies to directly administer medicine—a blessing for Methothe, who has trouble swallowing pills. A nurse's expert hands quickly insert an IV port into his arm to begin the life-saving treatment. The next morning Methothe is sitting up on his bed. His fever is almost gone, and his breathing is normal. Thanks to you, the right medication administered at the right time is healing him.

Donatha explains how happy she feels now that her son's fever is nearly gone. She is thankful he was able to get the life-saving care he needed, right when he needed it most.

Because of your support, the clinic is stocked with IV supplies to directly administer medicine.

Volunteers

Most of our volunteers come from the communities where we serve. Refugees learn how to spot disease and check on their neighbors. Mothers learn about prenatal and newborn care and share their knowledge with other mothers. Health messages reach more people, and more lives are saved because of community volunteers.

International volunteers also play an essential role. Specially trained volunteers deploy at the beginning of a sudden crisis. Doctors and nurses train health care workers and provide medical care. In the U.S., local volunteers give generously of their time to sort and pack medical supplies and provide urgent dental care.

SHAZA

Seven years ago, Shaza lost everything—her home in Syria, her school, extended family and friends. The civil war shattered her dream of becoming a pharmacist. Soldiers razed her entire town and killed her cousin.

Shaza's father, fearing for his family's lives, made the difficult decision to leave Syria. The family boarded a bus that would take them to Lebanon. As the bus drove away, Shaza felt terrible heartache leaving the life she knew and her loved ones behind.

Although her family was safe in Lebanon, life was difficult, and Shaza grew hopeless doing the only work she could find—collecting rocks in a field.

But, when she saw Medical Teams working in her camp, she wanted to learn more. Shaza trained to be a Refugee Outreach Volunteer. The training she received was provided by people like you. She began to teach others in her community how to stay healthy.

“Medical Teams gave me a new opportunity. Volunteering helped heal my heart. I can feel others' pain, even though I have my own pain. But sometimes it makes me forget about my own pain. My work is important, and it shows others that they are important.”

Shaza feels great joy knowing that her work is making a difference. Because of your support, with every new day, her hope grows. Your gifts save lives and empower refugees like Shaza, shining a light in dark places.

DR. MARTIN HIKIDO

Fourteen years ago, his wife received her diagnosis—cancer. With her chemotherapy under way, God had Dr. Martin Hikido's attention. He heard God calling him to use his dentistry skills to help others in need.

From his home in Cupertino, CA, Martin looked online and found Medical Teams' Mobile Dental program. He found the answer to his calling. Since then, he boards a plane to Oregon four times each year to volunteer at Mobile Dental clinics. Serving patients from schools, churches, homeless shelters and remote farming communities, Martin and other volunteers provide dental care to people who have few other options.

One story stands out in his mind. He was volunteering at a clinic when a teenage boy stepped into the Mobile Dental van. The boy sat nervously in the dental chair while Martin examined his fractured front tooth. The dentist and clinic staff treated him with kindness. Later that day, the clinic volunteer looked at Martin and said, “we made a difference in that kid's life today.”

“We're not just meeting the dental needs in the community,” said Martin, reflecting on his 14 years of volunteer service. “We're meeting other needs—helping people at a deeper core issue of being lonely or abandoned.”

It's a privilege to serve God and other people with what He has given me.”

Corporate & Foundation Partners

Over the last year, our corporate and foundation partners transformed the lives of the hurting in many ways—through generous funding, skill-based volunteering and medical supply donations.

BRINGING HOLISTIC HEALTH SERVICES TO VULNERABLE POPULATIONS

Providence Health & Services of Oregon and Swedish Health Services in Seattle are partnering with Medical Teams on an innovative new program pilot called Care and Connect – a model that is bringing direct medical care to remote and underserved U.S. communities.

Providence and Swedish have partnered with Medical Teams on mobile dental clinics for over a decade. They recognized our patients’ dental issues were often tied to deeper, more comprehensive health needs.

Together, we decided to expand our services and bring direct medical care to these communities to empower them and meet the need. “I think one of the critical things of the partnership with Medical Teams International in these dental clinics is it’s filling gap,” said Providence Program Manager Brett Hamilton.

Last year, the Care and Connect pilot successfully launched with six clinics which provided 203 procedures, valued at more than $30,000, to homeless individuals in Seattle. “This collaborative work has made an important and meaningful impact to those struggling with housing insecurity and those in need for supportive care”, said Sherry Williams Regional Director of Community Health Investment at Swedish.

COMPASSION FORCE PROGRAM ENGAGES CORPORATE PARTNER EMPLOYEES

In 2019, Medical Teams launched a new corporate partner employee volunteer engagement program called Compassion Force. Partners like Cambia Health Solutions, a 23-year partner of Medical Teams, joined the “Force” and engaged 73 employees to make 1,000 hygiene kits for vulnerable individuals in the Pacific Northwest.

The program serves two needs: build kits for vulnerable populations around the world and boost employee satisfaction through meaningful community engagement. Corporations like Cambia Health Solutions are recognizing the value in social responsibility.

“Volunteering with Medical Teams is one of the most rewarding ways Cambia employees give back,” said Alison Arella who leads corporate social responsibility at Cambia. “We look forward to promoting future kitting events so more employees have the opportunity to engage with such an impactful organization.”

Thank You to Our Generous Partners

How Our Generous Supporters Love Their Neighbors in Need

The generous spirit of Medical Teams International's donors is a true reflection of our calling in action. These dedicated supporters are committed to daring to love like Jesus by saving the lives of mothers and children, empowering refugees to care for the health of their neighbors and sending healing to disaster survivors when they need it most. Their gifts are leaving a legacy, bringing hope and restoring wholeness in a hurting world.

TOM AND SYDNEY HODGE

For the past six years, Tom and Sydney Hodge have been devoted supporters of the life-saving work done at Medical Teams. Their compassionate leadership and generosity have had an indelible impact, providing direct health services to thousands of people.

Thanks to their philanthropic investments in Medical Teams, community health workers and clinicians have reached more people in crisis, and local health systems have been strengthened. Tom has shared invaluable wisdom as an executive volunteer and created powerful connections to help expand the organization. Sydney has played a critical role as the Spiritual Care Chair for the Washington Healthy Women, Healthy World luncheon, guiding event leadership in devotion and prayer.

Tom and Sydney have experienced firsthand how lives are transformed through Medical Teams' work by participating in vision trips to Lebanon and Uganda and by leading community impact trips to Guatemala. Their involvement demonstrates to the people we serve that they truly matter.

We are blessed and grateful to have such incredible partners alongside us as we continue to walk in Christ's footsteps, loving our neighbors in need.

MILLIE MOORE-VOLL

When Millie Moore-Voll walks through her ranch in rural Sherman County, Oregon, she sees more than acres of electricity-generating windmills. Thanks to a planned legacy gift she established, revenue from the windmills will provide ongoing support for Medical Teams International.

For more than 20 years, Millie has supported the work Medical Teams does, serving vulnerable people around the world. She was first drawn to Medical Teams when she realized it combined faith with medical care, an approach that is dear to her heart.

"I realized there was no one to leave this to, as had been done before for generations," she said. "Because I had some heart and knowledge of Medical Teams, it was given to me that they should be the ones to inherit the funds generated from the windmills."

Millie's generosity will reach refugees in Lebanon and Uganda, malnourished children in Guatemala and disaster survivors around the world. It will ensure consistent, ongoing funding for life-saving programs for at least a decade—perhaps longer. Millie's gift demonstrates a legacy of love in action, a legacy that will heal countless people in crisis.

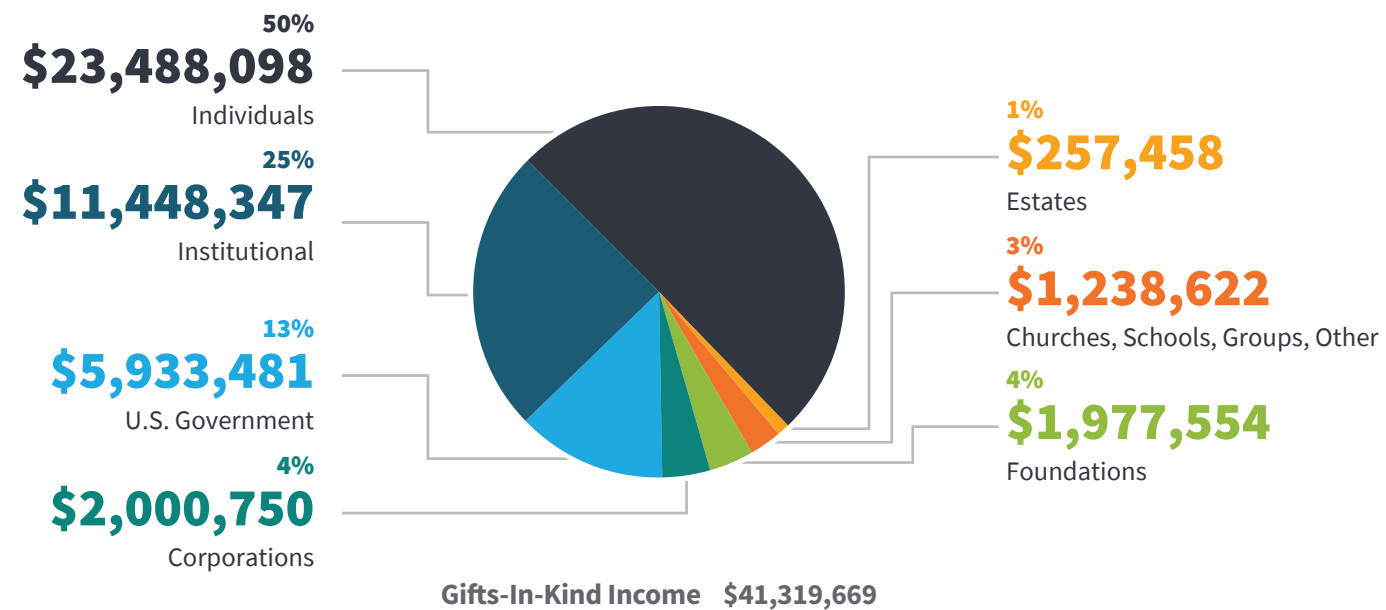

Your Generosity by the Numbers

When you give to Medical Teams, every dollar is maximized to have the greatest possible impact for people who are suffering, both here at home and abroad. Your compassion and generosity enable us to quickly mobilize medical supplies, volunteers and staff to places where the need is greatest. Thank you for your support.
